Stanley Cupp

Stanley Cupp

OCCUPATION

RETIRED HOCKEY PLAYER

DESCRIPTION

After retiring from the St. Cloud Saint Bernards, perennial doormat of Minnesota's "Pee Wee Hockey League," Stanley wandered about the country trying to find himself, failing miserably because there was no one home. Carmen happened upon him one day and hired him to be the gang's receptionist— she thought he had a winning smile, in spite of his seven missing front teeth. Recurring nightmares about playing goalie have turned both Stanley's hair and eyes prematurely grey. The aging ex-hockey star now raises and breeds armadillos for racing, although he has a devil of a time finding jockeys small enough to fit in those tiny saddles.
